Volume 10, 1988

Formerly Journal of Behavioral Assessment

The Journal of Psychopathology and Behavioral Assessment publishes articles on basic research, theory, and clinical investigation in psychopathology and behavioral assessment. The journal seeks to foster scientific understanding of psychopathology by focusing on: objective measurement and classification of normal and abnormal behavior; predisposing, precipitating, and maintaining factors (psychological and/or biological) of abnormal behavior; data-based theories of psychopathology; and scholarly reviews of major topics in psychopathology and objective assessment. Case studies are considered if they contribute significantly to developing knowledge in the journal's areas of interest. Articles on therapeutic intervention are considered only if they provide substantial advancement of knowledge in these areas. The journal publishes technical notes on instrumentation, commentaries on controversial issues, and book reviews in the aforementioned areas. Articles may be submitted to the Co-Editors or to the Associate Editor.
